SALSA Geophysics/SALSA EM, Location: Mercer Subglacial Lake

- Waking up to a warm windless day, the team broke down camp for our final push to SALSA Camp at Mercer Subglacial Lake.
- We waved goodbye to LA14 around 1030 and hit the road. Driving was **warm** today---Matt ended up driving in just a base layer, a midweight pull over, and a wind shell, fewer layers than he has ever worn after 1000s of miles snow machining in the area.
- Around 1745, we pulled into SALSA Camp to hugs from Steve Zellerhoff and Cindy Dean! We still have some work to do, but we are officially "pulled out" as an independent camp. It feels good to have heated spaces and warm food prepared by someone else for the first time since November 18th.
